FREDDIE PRINCE DIVORCED IN FRANCE

Harding, daughter of Governor W. P. G. Harding of the Federal Reserve Bank at Boston, formerly Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank at Washington.

Mr. Prince is the only son of Frederick H. Prince, Sr., millionaire Boston banker, and is a brother of Lieutenant Norman S. Prince, of the Lafayette Escadrille, whose memory is honored by a tablet in the State House here.

The marriage of Frederick H. Prince, Jr., and Miss Harding at Washington, June 13, 1917, was a brilliant society occasion and was attended by former President and Mrs. Wilson.

The luck of Freddie Prince has been proverbial among his friends. His life has been replete with excitement and danger. He has faced death in racing yachts that would port before sudden storms and he has narrowly escaped injury or death in fast automobiles.

On polo and hunting fields he has been known for the "bad" horses and suffered only bruising. Ten years ago, when he was one of a hunting party in France, a Mr. P. Prince was thrown from his mount into the swiftly flowing Gironde River. Several cavaliers dismounted and plunged in after her.

It was Freddie Prince who braved swirling rapids and, after a stiff fight, brought the drowning girl ashore. His luck, backed by his courage and promptness, saved by him.

If you have not received your bag, it may be because of this. Advise Handy Bag department, full name and address, if bag has not been secured within fifteen days of date of order.

The war put the final seal of Lady Luck's approval on the Boston chicanes. When Norman was killed in 1916, Freddie, Jr., was in training for the same service. He joined the Lafayette Escadrille, according to his brother's plan. He went through the war unscathed.

The war even brought him a bride, Elizabeth Harding, who made her debut in 1915, was active in war service. She served as telegraph operator in the women's training camp at Washington.

In June, 1917, Freddie Prince came home from France on furlough. His honeymoon to Miss Harding was announced. The wedding took place in St. John's Church at Washington.

TRAILERS FIND MARCINO; HIS ARREST NEAR

Joseph H. Marcino, brother of the late Jack Marcino who worked the First National Bank of Warren and other institutions, has been located.

He will be arrested within a few days, Assistant United States District Attorney John Sullivan told the American today.

Mr. Sullivan declined to say where Marcino is.

His statement concerning Marcino was made upon his return today from Chicago, where he had been with United States District Attorney Robert O. Harris to arrange for the extradition of Frank L. Taylor, 1924-week president of the Warren Bank, and Abraham Goldman, father-in-law of Marcino.

Taylor, according to his own statement made shortly after his arrest, was the tool of Marcino in the looting of the Warren Bank.

Taylor and Goldman were represented in Chicago at the hearing before United States Commissioner Clegg by Attorney Charles Bratton, noted criminal lawyer of Chicago.

Bratton made efforts to dismiss the charges against his clients, but was unsuccessful. Taylor is due in Boston tomorrow.

FIRE MENACES WOONSOCKET

Immediately after the first alarm every available piece of apparatus was called to the scene. Because of the fact that the store occupies a group of five different buildings connected on each floor, the flames spread rapidly.

Falling glass and timbers caused injuries to several firemen, while smoke from the blazing mercantile overcame a number of others.

The Providence fire department was not able to have apparatus ready to send in case of necessity.

NEW DIVIDEND FOR HANOVER DEPOSITORS

This is the second dividend, the first, of 25 per cent, amounted to $239,408. Savings department depositors have already been paid 100 per cent.

A Dull Thursday
Lenin's Turn, at Last?
A Shock for Kahlidjah
Uncle Joe and Shakespear

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright 1935 by Arthur Brisbane

THERE ISN'T much news this quiet Thursday. Four more Irishmen stand up before the firing squad and fall dead. That's one attempt to force men's opinions. In the Ruhr, German hostages are placed on locomotives of trains operated by French and Belgians to make sure the trains will not be freed. That's another attempt of the same kind.

Last night that idea was used by England's king. When he traveled a director of the railroad traveled ahead of him in another train. The trucks were well inspected.

AFTER ALL the rumors and false reports of events, it appears that Lenin is at last in danger, with one side paralyzed. You marvel that he has lasted so long, with the foul words and the bullets of two would-be assassins in his body.

If Lenin dies, control of Russia passes to Trotsky, who heads the Russian army and has put his son in the Russian navy. That may mean a new chapter in the history of Bolshevism.

THE WIFE OF Kemal Pasha, Turkey's husband, the Turkish emperor, has been named as ex-rebel Mohammed's power, appears in tight riding breeches. That would Mohammed's wife, Kahlidjah, the rich widow of Mecca, say to that, looking down from a Paradise, where, by the way, she is the only wife admitted.

Kemal, able to outwit all the Allies and outfight some of them, may find that at his wedding party and wife in tight breeches, may do to him what England and her fleet can't do. Religion is not to be trifled with. The more dangerous it is, the more dangerous it is.

UNCLE JOE CANNON, forty-six years in Congress, more than eighty years on earth, goes home to rest and enjoy life. Every day he visits the Second National Bank, which, practically every evening he plays "twenty-eight" bank poker—and wins. "Dad old age," you might say. An old man might be expected to sit up, enjoy the stars and see himself. "When do we go from here?" But old age at last is dull, with a few brilliant exceptions. Uncle Joe Cannon's retirement is no more unimportant or different to understand than that of any other space, who retired much earlier and visited the public house in stead of the Second National Bank.

Mrs. MULLARKEY, only twenty-two also left and pretty, wrote to her mother: "The mystery of the world he would laugh up." She turned on the gas, but didn't die. Mrs. Mullarkey and others will have all eternity, which is a long time to investigate mysteries of the world beyond. The mysteries of this world could keep anybody busy, with Europe, income tax, coal problem, bad weather, etc., to lead variety.

FIRPO, AGILE giant from the Argentine Republic comes to show us how human beings can be knocked senseless. Crowds pay to see him; the government of 'ridiculous' New York, most prosperous State in the Union, welcomes him, provides a commission to take care of him, and regulates the crowds, and, under government protection, he is permitted to commit assault and battery on such and such persons while a low-brow crowd bows its delight.

Do you wonder that crime increases when governments get a law against assault and battery in favor of gods, results with a substantial slice for the politicians?

A LEARNED psychologist tells you, heroes and cowards are both creatures of imagination. Who imagines only success is a hero. Who imagines failure is the coward.

While climbing up to attack Quebec and die gloriously, or the despondent man, killing himself because he lacked courage to enter a duel, were both moved by the power of imagination. So says the psychologist.

Another kind of man says the whole thing depends on various shades of the word "crimes." What you are and do.

ACCUSE THE HOUSE OF DAVID OF LIVING GIRLS IN TIGHTS AS LURE

COURT SUIT TO TEAR VEIL OF MYSTERY FROM CULT

Benton Harbor, Mich., March 15 (By Cosmopolitan News Service).—The veil hiding the mysteries of the House of David is likely to be torn aside in court next week.

If the suit of two Detroit girls who charge gross immorality, practicing of shocking rites and wholesale marriage at the behest of "King" Benj. Joseph falls, then the head of the House of David will be cleared of imputations that he used girls in tight as a lure to attract visitors to the colony and reap a harvest of a million dollars through their exploitation.

For months the civic element in this city has been hearing rumors of carnality and debauchery carried on at the House of David which made them gasp.

Last Summer 200,000 persons are said to have visited Eden Springs Park, the colony grounds. "It is a fine dancing along the midway" by girls of the colony dressed in short grass skirts was used to attract visitors, it was said.

Alarming accusations were featured in the press, as well as a zoo, a baseball game, a band concert and other

Society Authoress Runs Farm in Harvard Which Pays, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

A SOCIETY AUTHORESS who runs a farm—such is Miss Clara Eudicott Sears of No. 123 Beacon street, first cousin of the famous sports-woman, Miss "Slim" Sears.

The farm is on steep Prospect Hill—the Indians called it Macanachemo—in Harvard, Mass., where Miss Sears spends not only the Spring and Fall, but every weekend of the Winter months.

Every night that the small and slender white-haired mistress of The Pergola, as the farm is named, is absent from the city calls it by telephone. She has no manager, though there is an overseer who carries out her orders. Miss Sears knows exactly when each calf is born, she herself registers each animal on the place, she buys every single seed planted in the large vegetable and flower garden, and she can tell you precisely how many cans of milk and cream are shipped to Boston to be sold.

There are over 400 acres to the farm. The fifty-odd registered Gurnsey cattle have all been raised on the place; they are very aristocratic bovines and give such pure milk that it's all bought by Boston physicians. There are farm horses and more than half a dozen dogs, of which Miss Sears is especially fond.

Though the farm was started as a hobby of Miss Sears, the place has been run so efficiently that it now brings in money. Its owner still considers the management of The Pergola as her hobby and her writing as her profession.

THE HOUSE itself looks little like a farm house. Miss Sears lived for several years in Italy, and the house is like an Italian villa. It is all the American conveniences. It's a large white affair with green blinds and a red roof.

There's a romantic-looking terrace, commanding a gorgeous view of the surrounding hills, including Mt. Wachusett and Mt. Monadnock. It is usually on this terrace that Miss Sears does most of her writing. Then there's a really wonderful old cloister and an artificially laid out Italian garden to carry out the old-world touch. There are some stately columns in this garden which Miss Sears brought back from Venice with her.

LA FOLLETTE'S WIFE ASSAILS DEFENCE LAW

Washington, March 15.—The military situation in the United States in its relation to world peace was included among questions up for discussion at today's session of the conference of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

The National Defense Act of 1920 was assailed in addresses prepared for the session by Miss Amy Woods, national secretary of the league, and Mrs. Robert M. La Follette, wife of Senator La Follette of Wisconsin. Referring particularly to provisions in the act for the organized reserve of the army, Miss Woods declared they "threaten unduly to build up a military hierarchy, dominated by an artificially stimulated fear of our great bulk of loyal citizens who are producing our wealth for us in the mines and factories."

Mrs. La Follette declared that the league planned to make "the repeal of the dangerous provisions of the Army Reorganization Act a part of our working program."

Beauty, Art and Quality In Generous Measure

Its value furnishes an agreeable surprise—one would hardly expect such a generous measure for its price. $145 does not fully express its real worth—it might fairly be priced $150 to $200 more. Really a revelation in piano value and economy.

SCHOOL TEACHER COUNT'S BRIDE

New York, March 15.—Count Rene Gaston de Fontenillat, cousin of the Duchess of Marlborough and nephew of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, who came to this country a number of years ago for an American business career, has married a local teacher, Miss E. Tourist, it was learned today. The ceremony was performed by a deputy city clerk.

The Count, who is thirty years old, gave his occupation as merchant. The bride is one year his senior. The Count's mother, Juliet Smith, was an Alabama belle. Her wedding to Baron de Fontenillat here in 1887 was one of the social events of the season. They were divorced eleven years later.

The Baroness died in 1905, leaving her fortune to the Count on condition that he never speak to his father. Later he inherited money from an aunt on condition that he live a model life.

COURTENAY IN PLAY FULL OF GOOD CHEER

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

WILLIAM COURTENAY, champion of easy stage romances, deserves a better fate. An evening with this whirling dervish of the drama, at the Strand Arlington Theatre brings forth no deeper conviction than the folly of presenting one of the few remaining stage favorites in a night-horror not familiar to those who are willing to pay for real entertainment.

Mr. Courtenay and "Her Temporary Husband" at the Arlington catches public fancy, and may be set up as an artistic achievement for a dramatic star of established reputation. At a downtown theatre Mr. Courtenay would be a riot, which explains the difference between Boyston street and Chestnut square—so it is now known at Arlington square.

WELLY DETERING.

If you like farce, with a new twist and some action, "Her Temporary Husband" will interest you as one of the liveliest of the season's offerings. If you don't like farce, this same play will reveal your view of the drama generally and furnish good material for lunch counter conversation. Whether "Her Temporary Husband" is seen in Chestnut square or in a downtown theatre the impression would be the same—it is for your entertainment, admirably told.

NEW IDEA IN FARCE.

"Her Temporary Husband" provides Mr. Courtenay with his first venture into the world of farce and he makes the most of his opportunity. As a romantic hero he still holds the best record for successful performance, with "Under Cover" and he has more than held his own with other romantic vehicles that have coated the way dollar for the thrifty playgoer. In his present play he is equally romantic with the added charm of being deliciously amusing.

DEPOSITOR CAN SUE IF BANK FAILS TO PAY

The Supreme Court today handed down a decision upholding the right of a depositor to sue for damages if a bank fails to pay checks when a sufficient fund is on deposit to cover them.

Just. Cardozo of the United States Supreme Court handed down the decision in the case of Bank of America v. United States. The bank had refused to honor either check, and Cardozo ruled for damages. In Superior Court Judge Moran ordered a verdict for the bank, and Cardozo reversed the decision.

The decision, written by Justice Cardozo, reads: "If the check of the depositor exceeds the amount of the deposit, the bank may decline to pay and is not required to apply the amount on deposit in partial payment of the check; but a bank is bound to honor the checks of its depositors if it has sufficient funds belonging to them when a check is presented, provided the funds are not subject to some lien or claim."

"If the bank refused to pay one of its depositors' checks when in possession of his funds it is liable in action by the depositor. The two checks drawn by the plaintiff were presented for payment at the same time."

"There were sufficient funds on deposit to pay one of them, and, in our opinion, it was the duty of the bank, in the absence of custom or a rule of bankers to the contrary, to honor one of the checks, the bank having the right to make payment on one or the other, it may decide until the funds are exhausted."

FORMAL OPENING of the Newly Enlarged and Newly Furnished Department For MEN'S CLOTHING

But—though called a formal opening as a concession to convention—in the manner of its observance it is quite informal.

We just would like our friends to come and see.

The last word in the art of supplying the apparel needs of men.

You will see in this, the latest of many things that are making for progress in this establishment, the certain indication of success based on a fast growing and widespread good will among men of Boston and New England.

While admiring the very beautiful cabinet work developed in that solid looking and elegant wood, American Black Walnut, you will—knowing this company as you do—be assured that new equipment and fixtures, making for better efficiency and agreeable, even luxurious environment, is not and cannot be a substitute for quality in merchandise, or an excuse for high prices.

It may be appropriate to mention here the foundation upon which this Men's Clothing Department is building so permanently.

Giving all due consideration to style, we nevertheless place quality first.

That is why you see the emphasis here on clothes of 100% wool. That is why we are not content with exercising ordinary care to assure quality—but retain the chemical laboratories of Arthur D. Little, Inc., of Cambridge to test and certify our fabrics.

If you will read our announcements from time to time you will be interested to see the development of a Men's Clothing Business based primarily on the principle of selling not only fashionable apparel, but the longest wearing clothes—suits and coats that will give the best service—at prices that the average man knows he must pay for satisfactory wear.

We hope you will find the time and the inclination to see the new department this week.

FOWLKES AND EHMKE IN A PITCHING DUEL FOR THE RED SOX

YANIS BATTLE TO GET REVENGE

Hot Springs, Ark., March 15.—The tip of the yellow blades against the yard stiffer quality was due to a mound once more at Watkinson Park today when the Reds and the Yans of the Red Sox squad met in their second pre-season game.

"Fitz" Fowlkes, the monster, and Howard Ehmke, the long, lean lecher from Los Angeles, were scheduled to mount the hill for the Reds and the Yans in a game good time was to be had by all.

The Yans following the time honored tradition of the Red Sox, were out for the day, having lost yesterday and today, and were looking for a win to get back on track.

They figure the game was a draw in the opening round, and today the law of averages was in their favor.

MEN'S HATS

new Spring shapes, new Spring shades in men's hat hats

Forty snow storms this winter and every one of them a "rough-on-hats" the first day of Spring just one week away—Easter here in sixteen days—reasons enough for a fresh, new Spring hat.

But the hats themselves supply plenty of other good reasons no extreme shapes, no queerly placed bows, no strange colors; but hats with a nice balance between brim and top and in the new shades of tan and gray. And note well this latter point, for if your new hat is to be really new it will be light gray or tan and have contrasting band of the same color as the hat, but several shades darker.

The Way of a Modern Artist Is Hard

The Path of Michael Angelo Was Also Thorny
Copyright, 1922, Star Company

Patrick J. Moloney of No. 553 Fifty-sixth street, Brooklyn, N. Y., wants to know how the young artist of today can possibly hope to get along, when nobody wants to buy anything except "old masterpieces." Mr. Moloney has taken his own paintings to great public museums only to be told that they did not want MODERN work.

It is discouraging and made more so by the fact that this is not an age of art. The human race, like an individual human being, does only ONE THING really well at a time.

Just at present the race is engaged in industrial development, and all that goes with it, science, machinery, engineering. The mind of the race is not on art. Therefore the individual who chooses to devote himself to an art career is going outside of the general current and will probably land nowhere, or at least not travel far.

However, young artists of this day can find some comfort in the experiences of the artists of olden times. If Mr. Moloney went to the great art museums or, better still, to some American hundred-time millionaire, with a genuine first-class painting by Michael Angelo, he would get the warmest welcome and a million dollars for the painting.

Yet Michael Angelo, when he was a youth, before he had begun his really great work and gained recognition, might have written a letter like that of Mr. Moloney.

In order to attract attention Michael Angelo made a statue of marble, imitating the style of the ancient Greek sculptors, then very fashionable in Italy. He buried his statue of marble in the ground to make it look old. After a certain length of time he dug it up and shipped it to a famous rich Cardinal in Rome, telling him that he had dug it up.

The Cardinal sent word to him, "Tell nobody where you found the statue. I shall pay you well for it and shall come and have excavating done in the hope of finding similar beautiful works of art."

Michael Angelo replied that the Cardinal need not bother to do any digging, inasmuch as he himself had made the wonderful Greek "antique" and could make as many more as the Cardinal might care to buy.

This Cardinal, a wise man with a sense of humor, took the imposture kindly and became a friend of Michael Angelo. Later the Pope himself was Michael Angelo's patron and gave him as one job the building of St. Peter's, most magnificent church in the world.

After he had built the church he worked for years making magnificent paintings that adorn it. A good deal of his time unfortunately was wasted by Papal orders, in developing marble quarries, which might as well have been attended to by somebody else.

But, thanks to the Popes, his genius was brought out, fully developed. Incidentally it is as far above that of all other artists, except the ancient Greeks, as Niagara is above our waterfalls.

Yet, in spite of this, Mr. Moloney and other young artists will notice that Michael Angelo himself had to "fake" a Greek antique in order to attract immediate and profitable attention.

Forty-Eight Hour Law

The House of Representatives in Rhode Island under Democratic control has just passed the law which limits the time in which women and minors can be employed in the factories of Rhode Island to forty-eight hours a week.

This is the law which has been in operation in Massachusetts for some years. It is the law which all the progressive States in the country enjoy. It has never been repealed anywhere it was once adopted. Last month the Democratic majority put the same law through the House of Representatives in the Granite State, but the Senate, which is Republican by gerrymander, killed it.

We suppose that the Rhode Island Senate, which is also Republican by virtue of gerrymandered districts, will defeat the forty-eight-hour bill in Rhode Island.

Very well, the Republican party will have to take the responsibility of rejecting a humane and progressive reform. The Democrats of Rhode Island and New Hampshire need not be discouraged. It is a Pyrrhic victory for their opponents. If they stand fast they will soon control the Legislatures. For a just cause is not permanently defeated unless it is deserted.

Our Political Judges

A representative of the Boston Bar Association was arguing against the bill for the election of judges. He argued that judges must be kept out of politics and must not owe their appointment to politics. Whereupon Representative Mollen of Charlestown remarked that it was a truism that all our judges are appointed, directly or indirectly, through politics, and their appointments are either the reward of political service rendered by the appointee himself to the party in power or as a reward for the same kind of service rendered by his friends who urged his appointment.

This is absolutely true in most cases. Nor does it follow that this method results in bad judges. Men who have been successful in the rough and tumble of politics know nature and have vastly more experience in human nature than the kind of man who a committee of the bar is likely to recommend, and if anybody thinks a bar association is disinterested they mean the disinterestedness of a committee of a bar over wholly altruistic.

Stockholders' Bill

Editor Boston American:

Your editorial, "Stockholders' Bill," was a very well argued and timely article and I trust that it may result in stopping this pernicious bill. I regret to learn, however, that it has already passed the Senate. The argument advanced, that the legislation is desired for the purpose of keeping stockholders' lists out of the hands of brokers, speculators and stock peddlars, is laughable, especially when one knows some of the people who are back of this bill.

The rights of minority stockholders are (teble enough under our law, and what rights they now have will be completely undetermined if the legislation proposed passes. You will render a real public service by carrying on a campaign against this bill.

Irish Republicans

In these days when the world looks on at the warfare raging in Ireland, it is clear that the British Empire may remain intact, let me quote the motives of the Irish and women of the Republican Party:

"We are ready to welcome peace with England on the basis of full, separate independence, which is a just basis, and our cause is the common cause of mankind. To that cause we have pledged ourselves, and our people to remain faithful unto death."

From the message of the Dail Eireann, 1921, to the people of the United States.

Co-ed Chaperons

Editor Boston American:

Thank you, ever so much for your article in favor of our co-ed students. The attitude of the faculty has been very disappointing to many a student of B. U. In justice to all concerned and to the school especially, this affair ought to have been disposed of without broadcasting it all over the world, as in a certain other paper in Boston. I think that the days when a girl student needed a chaperon, who really was having a nice nap and not watching the young people are gone, and an entire race that therefore the drastic measures of Dean Davis were overdone.

WORDS FROM THE LIPS OF WISE MEN

THIS mind alone can obtain for us heavenly cheerfulness and light.

The poetry of opera is often as expensively ill as the music is good.

We are more heavily taxed by our idleness, pride and folly than we are by our government.

It is a great error to take facility for good—tenderness without discretion is no better than a more pardonable folly.

All mankind acknowledge themselves able and sufficient to do many things which actually they never do.

The knowledge drawn from experience is quite of another kind than that which flows from speculation or discourse.

To be indifferent whether we embrace falsehood or truth is the great road to error.

The per capita net general debt of the city of Boston in 1921 was $60.80, assuming the population was 813,895 in January.

THE TISBO CASE IS ANOTHER BRIEF FOR AMERICANIZATION

By Herbert Kaufman

TISBO, an Italian private banker and steamship agent, declaims, leaving empty vaults behind him. He won't get far—the bloodhounds of the air are ahead, searching all lands and seas. Wherever a train goes, a motor drives or a ship points, a radio barrier rises across its tracks—an invisible net, but stronger than meshes of steel.

The Tisbo concern was not under State or Federal supervision. Half its bankrupted depositors though won't know that. They'll blame the authorities as well as the shakedown. The age-old wall of injustice for the poor is already sounding its death knell.

More applauding crowds in the making for the next blatherstick, who gets up on a soap box and yelps at democracy.

Another brief for Americanization.

Bond Private Banks or End Them

People who read and write and speak English aren't so easily deluded or exploited. Foxes are fattest in goose country. Cunning instinctively preys upon benightedness.

The safeguards with which this republic surrounds all its people might as well not exist for multitudes who have no means of learning about them.

Our roads are marked and they can't spell the signs. Protection is at their elbow with no tongue to declare itself.

The Tisbo episode should be the final argument for English and vernacular posters in every private bank, plainly stating the irresponsibility under which they operate. Or better still, for the adequate bonding or elimination of private banks.

The Man With a Fifty-Cent Dollar

Compulsory education will tend to banish many loose and unsavory practices. Our seven million mainly non-reading aliens are always at the mercy of shysters and sharpers. So are several million uneducated Americans. Few of these folk are aware of pure food statutes; they can't benefit from sanitary progress, read health bulletins or know what Congress is doing in the common interest.

An uniformed and ignorant mob and the nation has not qualified them to inherit the estate. Rascally shopkeepers, lawyers, landlords and employers constantly pick the illiterate's pocket and outrage his privileges.

An uneducated man is a perpetual fifty-cent piece; he never gets full value for his money or time. The food adulterator, the shoddy seller, the labor agent and all the sharks preying in the back waters of trade and finance fatten on his wages.

The Statute of Liberty will hold a brighter torch when the statute of literacy is chiseled on the base.

An Unwise and Perilous Economy

Every nerve of commerce reaches to New York—now the first market place of the world and chief counting house of civilization.

Whatever the transactions of the continent some phase of every important barrier is determined in Manhattan.

Cotton planter, wheat grower, manufacturer, mine operator and retailer, in one way or another, must keep in touch with the affairs of the great port through which international traffic passes in steadily increasing volume.

New York is henceforth to have fewer letter deliveries. A blow at efficiency everywhere. Lagging clocks for all offices and plants. The rest of the country will immediately suffer from tardy correspondence, delayed shipments and kindred knarls upon prosperity.

Forty-eight States may prepare to twinge whenever the metropolis is pinched.

Will Hays, when postmaster-general, called it the neck of our entire system, and worked persistently to widen the pass and expand service.

Mr. New contemplates an unwise and perilous economy. Time Adopts a New Foot-Print

Talking pictures are ready for delivery. De Forest has perfected simultaneous photography of speech and action. All a matter of sight and sound waves.

Calmness is a steadily increasing commodity and exact historical. Your grandchildren will meet Harding face to face and hear his living voice.
